CONTACT WITH LONDON MADE BY U. S. PLANE

Men in Aircraft Over New Jersey Talk with Others in England

MESSAGES HEARD CLEARLY

Experiment Made by A. T. & T. Story" Is Given to Star Correspondent

BY HOMER H METZ
Marion Star Staff Writer

HADLEY FIELD, NEW BRUNSWICK N J June 25—For the first time in history a telephone conversation from an airplane flying 1 000 feet over New Jersey direct to London was accomplished here today under auspices of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co

The plane a Fairchild cabin monoplane was in the air 15 minutes when contact with London was established by an engineer of the A T & T

After the contact was established Flory took the line and said Hello London

Heard Clearly

The answer came back clearly Hello Plane we can hear you clearly

Herbert Flory manager of the International News Service was put on the line

Hello Metz how are you? Flory said with

Hello Flory this is quite a momentous occasion I can hear you quite clearly I answered

First I would like you to take a message of greeting to International News Service and International News Service clients Flory said I wish to one of the boys in the United States would be over here '

At this point there was some little confusion the only time the conversation was interrupted but it was quickly reestablished and talking was resumed

Earhart Message Given

Mr Paul Hampton of the London Evening Standard is in the room' Flory said 'Have you any message for the Standard?'

Yes I have a message from Miss Amelia Earhart the first woman to fly the Atlantic Put Mr Hampton on

The following message was then read to him from Miss Earhart

It is a pleasure for me to take even the smallest part in an experiment such as this Telephoning across the Atlantic was a great accomplishment a short while ago Doing so from an airplane is greater still

With long distance flights becoming more and more frequent such service will soon be a tremendous factor in the transportation of freight and passengers Not only will it be comforting to all the pilot but air travelers appreciate

Down there in the long night they are eagerly waiting to see the first sunrise many weeks hence

How many of us take the trouble to see the sun rise or give a thought to many blessings on this beautiful earth?

The Byrd expedition groping in the half darkness in antarctic snow will appreciate regular sunrise and sunset when they return to this blessed land

YOU read in the New Testament of the unhappy woman saved from death by stoning and that method of inflicting death habitual among the Jews, to whom crucifixion was unknown, seems far away

NO WORD OF FLIERS

Many conflicting rumors have not helped in finding Major Franco, left Major Ruiz De Alda right and Senor Madariago below, Spanish aviators who started out from Cartagena, Spain in the giant plane, Numancia and have not been heard from since They intended to fly to Fayal Azores and from there to New York Portuguese gunboats dispatched to locate the plane when reported missing have not found any trace of the amphibian.

Gloom Hangs Over Spain As No News Of Fliers Is Heard; Search Continues

Public Anxiety for Safety of Maj. Ramon Franco, National Hero, Has Become Intense, Destroyers Scour Seas About the Azores

MADRID June 25—A pall of gloom hung over all Spain today as the hours stretched into days without revealing a trace of the four missing Spanish aviators who left Cartagena late Friday afternoon expecting to reach the Azores Saturday morning A wireless read search of the seas near these islands by naval craft and air planes has been fruitless.

Since 12 o'clock when he flew to South America Maj Ramon Franco leader of the transatlantic expedition has been a national hero and public anxiety for his safety and that of his companions Captains Ruiz De Alda and Gallarza and Mechanic Madariaga has become intense

The ocean expanse between the Portuguese coast and the Azores today was dotted by numerous craft of several nations cooperating in the search but hopeful tidings from these were entirely lacking

Spanish destroyers and a squadron of seaplanes were scouring the seas about the Azores where the Italian steamer Greldon reported hearing the sound of an airplane engine early Saturday morning but wireless messages received from them late last night indicated their search was vain

Part of the searching squadron sped towards a point about 110 mile north of the Azores where the steamer Magallanes was reported to have sighted the wreckage of a plane possibly that of the hydroplane used by the missing fliers

First Parachute Drop Gives Local Man 'Quite a Thrill'

"IT'S quite a thrill"

That was Arthur H. Kenyon's impression of his first parachute jump, made Sunday, which was incidentally the first to be made at the municipal landing field since it was purchased last year.

Kenyon, who is now enrolled as a flying student with the B & T Airways, made the 3,000 foot jump late Sunday afternoon before a large crowd. He intends to repeat his performance in the future

Kenyon fell about 200 feet before his 'chute opened, witnesses say. The jumper gets a rather sudden jerk as the 22-foot parachute opens in mid air, Kenyon admitted.

The jump is made from a wing of a plane which is nearly brought to a standstill at the desired altitude The jumper faces the direction the plane is moving, standing on the rear edge of a wing, and jumps off backwards

"I wasn't nervous," Kenyon said "The first 200 feet, you drop pretty fast, but after the 'chute opens, you fall about 12 feet a second It took about three or four minutes to come down. Straps around your legs and one around your waist hold you securely"

Kenyon, who lives at 419 Blaine av, is employed in the mills here. He took some aerial training in the world war.

Dismisses Libel Suit with Just 20 Words

NEW YORK, June 25—With 27 words Supreme Court Justice Curtis A Peters today dismissed an opera singer's libel suit for $200,000 against Otto H. Kahn, noted financier and philanthropist.

In a decision handed down today he granted the motion of Attorney Nathan Burkan for Otto Kahn to dismiss the complaint of Rosalinde Morini, who charged that a letter written by the patron of music had damaged her career to the extent of a quarter of a million dollars.

"Motion granted with ten dollars costs," said Justice Peters' decision, "on the ground that the letter complained of, is not libelous per se. It cannot therefore be made so by innuendo."

ARREST 10 IN RAID ON BIG RUM STILL

Completely Stocked Farm Seen as Blind for Michigan Distillery

DETROIT June 25—Ten men were arrested today and equipment valued at thousands of dollars was confiscated by federal agents in a raid on one of the largest bootleg distilleries in Michigan

The distillery was located in two large barns on a farm near here The farm, stocked with implements and cattle, was a 'blind,' according to Thomas H Brennan, deputy prohibition administrator in charge of the raid

Brennan claimed the distillery was in full operation when the agents made their raid. Two copper column steam stills, more than 20 feet high, were bubbling in the preparation of alcohol, he said and approximately 35,000 gallons of alcohol mash stood in vats and coolers nearby.

"WHITE WAY" NOW ASSURED FOR CENTER ST.

Announcement Made by Mayor at Meeting of City Council

MAIN ST. IN DOUBT

Letter from C. D & M. Brings Only Partial Solution to Controversy

Center st will get 'white way' lights and will get them in sufficient time to be made a part of the general improvement program outlined for that street Mayor Emery Murphy said last night The lights will be mounted on arm brackets 100 feet apart on either side of Marion's principal east and west street, between Oak st and Baker st

The contents of an answer of the C D & M Electric Co in response to a demand for action in accepting or rejecting a proposed contract for the installation of lights on Main and Center sts sent to them by Mayor Murphy were not made public at council meeting last night Instead, city officials decided to withhold the letter

Main st is evidently 'in the dark' as far as white way lights are concerned If there is an agreement between the company and council, it has been a tacit one as far as the public is concerned Mayor Murphy did not indicate in any way that Main st would get lights however

Problem Solved

Announcement of the intention of council and the electric company to install lights on Center st clears up a situation that for some time threatened to permit new paving work on that street without first installing conduits under the street surface

This would have necessitated almost immediate excavation in a new pavement in case an agreement was later reached As far as the Main st light question is concerned city officials have indicated that an agreement is not necessary until work is ready to start to resurface that street No action has been taken thus far to assure just exactly what will be done towards paving or resurfacing Main st

City officials, it is indicated are content as long as provision for lights is made to keep pace with pavement and resurfacing work This will at least give several more weeks in which an agreement as to a style of mounting satisfactory to council, the electric company and uptown business men may be reached

Rates Basis of Dispute

There has at no time been any discussion with the possible exception of rates over any provision of the interurban furnish lights for Center st However this work was incorporated with a contract to provide

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Watermelons, which made their initial appearance here nearly three weeks ago, have seen some active price cutting on local markets. Melons formerly selling for $1.50 and $1.75 are now beneath the $1 mark, while choice varieties are available at 59 cents, grocers say.

Cantaloupes have also suffered in the melon cuts, but these were at no time above the 25-cent mark on local markets. They range from 10 to 20 cents now.

New yellow transparent apples are available as low as two pounds for 27 cents, grocers reported this morning. These are slightly larger than the first ones received here last week. Still they are quite green and none too large. Cheaper fruit will be available within a few weeks, while the local crop is expected to get under way here in the course of two or three months.

Wieners made a two-cent jump in price this morning, now standing at 32 cents. Neck bones, formerly quoted at nine cents, are available at seven cents.

Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain

CHICAGO, June 25—Heavy profit taking sales caused a sharp reaction in local wheat prices in the late trade yesterday, after an advance of 3c from Saturday's close had been scored on increasingly bullish crop damage reports. Moderate gains were held despite the heavy realizing. Corn dragged in a quiet trade, with values slightly higher early but lower at the close.
Wheat finished the session with net gains of 1@1¾c. Corn closed ¼@½c down; oats ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower, and rye ⅝@1¾c up. Winnipeg wheat futures closed 2¾@2¾c higher. Liverpool finished 3⅜@3¾d up.

Liverpool Is Strong

Continued drought in Canada and our Northwest and heavy rains in the Southwest over the week-end led to a flood of damage reports which caused a broad demand for wheat at the outset. Liverpool was stronger than due and reported increased speculative demand because of the crop scares in North America. Their prices held the advance, despite the fact that they went above a parity with Argentina, which led to expectations of pressure from import wheat.
There was nothing to account for the heavy realizing sales which persisted in the local market other than the desire to accept profits on the good advance. News was all bullish and so was sentiment. The Canadian forecast is for fair and warmer and there are similar indications for our Northwest.
All advices from the Southwest spoke of continued deterioration, and Nebraska joined in the complaints with reports of scab infested areas. While figures on yields where harvesting is under way are hard to obtain, they are reported as carrying greatly and generally disappointing.

Decrease Disappointing

With the exception of the disappointing decrease of only 1,282,000 bu. in the visible supply, weekly statistics were bullish. World shipments totaled 15,841,000 bu. yet there was a decrease of 3,640,000 bu. in ocean stocks. Export demand was quiet over the week end in North America, but Europe was credited with purchases of 1,000,000 bu. Argentine wheat.
Corn was a sluggish market. There was a little buying through commission houses and by locals on the early strength in wheat, but selling increased on the upturn and prices dropped back easily. Favorable weather ruled over the belt for the week end and more is in prospect. However, crop observers reiterated that conditions are not what they should be, with general interest.

Corn Run Heavy

Effects of the heavier run of corn the past week were shown in the visible supply which increased 430,-000 bu for the week. Shipping demand was not so brisk, with sales of only 33,000 bu. Bookings were lighter at 35,000 bu.
Oats followed corn in an uneventful trade. Visible stocks decreased 205,000 bu. Rye continued to take its incentive from wheat. The visible supply decreased 52,000 bu.
In the cash market wheat was 1@3c higher; corn ½c lower @ 1c up; oats unchanged to ½c lower; rye dull, and barley steady.
Cars inspected: wheat, 79; corn, 310; oats, 73; rye, 1; and barley, 15.

SHORTAGE IN MONEY FAILS AT HANDICAP

New Advances Started by Number of Active Industrials Items

UTILITIES BUOYANT

Professionals Find Line of Least Resistance Is Upward

BY W. S. COUSINS
I. N. S. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, June 25—In spite of high money rates and the prospect of heavy withdrawals of money from speculative channels over the week-end, new advances were started today in a number of the active industrial and public utility stocks.
The last week in June is generally regarded as an "in between" period, due to the necessity of gathering in funds for very heavy payments at the banks in the first week of July.
When the bears discovered they were unable to force prices lower in the forenoon, they covered up their tracks, and their buying demand was augmented by the professionals who found the line of least resistance was upward. Even if there is to be a squeeze in the money market, it cannot last more than a week or 10 days, according to the bulls, who do not look for anything higher than a 12 per cent rate at any time.
American Can took its place today as the leader of the popular industrials, moving up to the year's highest price above 151. The utilities boasted quite a lot of buoyant stocks, including Public Service of N. J., above 104; Columbia Gas above 80; Brooklyn Union Gas, for which the bulls have set a top price of $300 a share.

BANK CLEARINGS

Monday bank clearings ran close the amount cleared a week ago, reports from clearing headquarters at the National City Bank & Trust Co., show. Yesterday's total was $100,-508,490. A week ago, $101,382,93 was cleared.

LIGHTNING STRIKES HOUSES, SKIPS DOWN

Heaviest Rainstorm of Season in Cuyahoga and Adjacent Counties

CLEVELAND, June 25—Accompanied by sharp lightning and wind, the heaviest rainstorm thus far this season swept Cuyahoga and adjoining counties early today. Much damage was reported.

In this city lightning struck four houses. At one, the rooming house operated by Mrs. Myrtle McClellan, it followed, routing 17 persons from their beds.

Rain fell faster than the drainage system could carry it away, with the result that scores of automobiles and homes were marooned, some in as much as four feet of water.

The Cleveland airport had reports that at least six planes were forced down nearby. The Nickel Plate tracks at one point here were under water temporarily.

GLOWING HEALTH BROUGHT QUICKLY BY NEW KONJOLA

Modern Medicine Triumphed Where Other Remedies and Treatments Failed

MRS. LENA CLAPPER

"How wonderful it is to be well again, and I owe it, all to Konjola," said Mrs. Lena Clapper, 408 South Seventh Street, Columbus. "I suffered for four years from a badly disordered stomach. Everything I ate caused gas, bloating and piercing pains. There was a heavy feeling in my stomach. Pains in my side and shoulders were almost unbearable, and my heart palpitated, and I was short of breath. I was growing weaker, and felt discouraged.

"But the results from a short treatment with Konjola amazed me. By the time I had finished the third bottle, my health was restored. Now I eat whatever I care to, without suffering afterward. My food nourishes me, and I am gaining in strength. I am so happy over what Konjola has done that I praise it every chance I get.

Konjola is sold in Marion, O., at Busey & Sams Pharmacy, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

A fourth court will be held Thursday evening at which Ambassador and Mrs. Dawes will present 13 additional Americans.

As is customary at these courts those eligible for presentation in diplomatic circles will make their bows to royalty first followed by a second court at which those in the general circle are presented.

Ambassador and Mrs. Dawes will be accompanied to the diplomatic circle tomorrow evening by Ray Atherton, counsellor of the American embassy, and Mrs. J. Lamont Bolles, wife of the first secretary of embassy. Marquise Merry Del Val, wife of the Spanish ambassador, will present Mrs. Dawes to the queen.

Case of Companionship

...here was a close with Miss Hix ... he was asked.

"No," he replied. "It was a case of companionship with a most desirable girl—but as she was desirable ... treat us. She was to all ... with me praise [illegible]."

Snook said he first met Miss Hix three years ago at Ohio State where she came as a special student. They became close friends and often went motoring together. They discussed ... matters and exchanged books and ... He said that she had read considerably more on such subjects than he had, he declared.

I refute the statement of her father that I broke down her moral reserve," said the professor. That is not true. She was perfectly willing ... under the arrangement with me.

Miss Hix never wanted to marry him, Snook said. She "wouldn't marry him for a million." Snook declared. She never asked him to divorce his wife. "I expected to go along as they were going until she left school and then he expected that she would pass out of his life forever.

He did not educate her as reported although he loaned her sums of money which she always insisted upon paying back. Asked to describe Miss Hix he said:

She was very dignified and neat in appearance. She was a studious type. Outwardly she was calm, but when she was aroused she was hard to deal with. She was quite athletic."

Snook scoffed at the contention of the prosecution that the crime was premeditated. The pistol which Snook said he had hired the slaying he could have purchased. Miss Hix and killed her with a pistol, he could have resorted to drugs which were available at the university.

No Drugs, He Says

"Was Miss Hix addicted to drugs as reported?" he was asked.

No," he replied. "On one occasion she asked me for some cocaine to remove a pain on her ear but that was the only time either of us was addicted to drugs."

Snook said Miss Hix always wanted him week ends when she had time off. At the time of the murder he said his mind was harassed by many worries. There was the closing session at the university which piled up work on him, there was bitter strife over the faculty, he was on edge over the necessity of getting projects ready for a new tenant and his mail waiting for the magazine for which he was writing. Hunter Trader and Trapper was overdue. Then too he was getting ready for a reunion near Cincinnati.

Overwhelmed with Regrets

It was to be a gang over the week end with his wife and baby to the reunion to which Miss Hix objected and this led to the quarrel while they were riding in his blue coupe that culminated in the tragedy.

Have you any regrets? Snook was asked.

His mouth quivered as he replied. Regrets? I am overwhelmed with regrets. I am in a daze. Everything has come down upon me crushing me. I cannot tell you in words how much I do regret.

Snook Removes College Effects

COLUMBUS June 25—Dr. James Howard Snook, the confessed cold slayer, and deposed faculty member of the Ohio State university today had severed every connection with the college.

Even his personal effects have been removed.

Just at twilight last night the doctor who admits fatally stabbing Miss Theora Hix 24 ... at the college and beating her with a hammer was taken from the county jail and accompanied by authorities, was driven to his office in the veterinary building at the university.

Meets His Wife

Once there Dr. Snook removed his personal belongings and carried them to his home, which is near the campus.

At his home the doctor and his wife were together for a few moments. Newspapermen made no attempt to overhear the meeting. It was a courtesy to the wife who remained loyal to the husband who sought the companionship of a university co-ed.

A survey of the list of 75 prospective jurors 12 of whom will hear the man's trial scheduled to start July 22, showed the names of 20 women.

An odd fact too, was that the names included that of Mrs. Carrie Baumgartner who has once before crossed with the doctor in a legal battle.

Following the death of Anna F. Baumgartner a will deeded to Snook some of the Grove City property of the woman.

Dr. Snook it is said had been a close friend of the widow.

Heirs to the estat of Mrs. Baumgartner contested the will, and Mrs. Carrie Baumgartner, one of the witnesses to the last testament was one of the chief figures in the court battle which followed and from which the heirs emerged successful in breaking the will.

King George has so far recovered from his setback of three weeks ago that the plans to drive from Windsor to London, next Monday, and take part in the national thanksgiving service for his recovery in Westminster Abbey the following Sunday, an announcement that will bring relief to the admirers of a good king and a fine Christian gentleman the world over.

Sixty-five anarchists and other alien criminals held at Ellis Island for deportation started an outbreak in the hope of overpowering the guards and escaping. Anarchists are utterly out of sympathy with the American form of government, but it's worth noting that none of them relishes the idea of being transported back to their native lands.

It's hard to understand how there can longer be question of the great superiority of Yale over Harvard as an educational institution. All three of the Yale crews won from the Crimson in last week's New London regatta.

Jean de Castellane, municipal councillor of Paris, writing in La Liberte, urges the erection of a monument to the late American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, holding that "France owes almost as great a debt of recognition to Mr. Herrick as to Marshal Foch." It certainly would be a graceful tribute by France to one who proved a great friend and lover of France.

After eight years of excavating, scientists have found in China, in a limestone stratum of the pleistocene period, a part of a jawbone and twenty teeth which convince them that their find is not only the oldest human remnant, but also that it represents what probably was the immediate ancestor of man, linking him with the lower animals. Let the legislators of Tennessee put that in their pipes and smoke it.

Hope About Abandoned.

As the days pass, there is a dwindling of hope for the safety of the four Spaniards who hopped off from Cartegena, late last Friday afternoon, for a flight to America by way of the Azores. Since their plane faded from sight off Cartegena, nothing definite has been heard from or of them. The sound of a plane engine was reported to have been heard by an Italian steamship early Saturday morning near the Azores. Another steamship reported having seen a flare before dawn of the same day. Still another steamer was reported to have seen the wreckage of a plane, which was thought possibly to be that of the plane of the four Spaniards, but there has been nothing but report and conjecture.

Of course, there is always the possibility that Major Franco and his three companions, Captains Ruiz de Alda and Gallarza and Mechanician Madariaga may be rescued. Their hydro-airplane may still be afloat. We of America know how a crew of one of our planes was picked up at sea days after they very generally had been thought lost. Again, there is always the chance that they may have been picked up by a vessel unequipped with wireless and may later be landed at some port, but passing craft are so many on the waters the quartet crossed and so much time has elapsed, that but little hope can be pinned on this chance. The sad probability is that the four have lost their lives in an attempted flight which, had it been successful, would have proved nothing, as the Atlantic has already been twice crossed from east to west. Successful, the flight would have done nothing more than give acclaim to Major Franco, who has been a national figure in Spain since his flight to South America, three years ago, and his three companions.

It has been demonstrated that such a flight is possible. Stronger and more powerful machines must be developed to show it to be practical. The Spanish machine did not fit the requirements to make this proof.

Ground for Rejoicing.

There was rejoicing throughout the republic of Mexico, Sunday, and the altars of her Roman Catholic cathedrals and churches were buried under the floral offerings of untold thousands of devout worshippers who entered her sacred edifices to leave their offerings as mementoes of their thankfulness that, after three years of discord, peace had been arranged between church and state.

It is estimated that not less than 100,000 made the pilgrimage to the national shrine, the Church of the Blessed Virgin of Guadalupe, situated in the northeastern part of Mexico City, to pay their devotions and offer thanks over the approaching resumption of religious services in the Catholic churches of the republic. The demonstration at this church was duplicated in a lesser degree throughout the land.

The day was not marked by any official ceremonies, for the priests have not yet returned to their pulpits. The manifestations which marked it were simply the spontaneous demonstrations of the faithful. Accord was not reached until late Friday afternoon, and hence time was not afforded for any prearranged ceremonies, which made the manifestations all the more remarkable.

It may be said that the people of Mexico have good reason to be thankful that there no longer is discord between their government and the predominant church of the land, and this is true regardless of their creed. The entire civilized world, especially the United States, has ground for thankfulness that millions in Mexico are no longer to be denied the benefits of religious services in their temples of worship. No matter what their religion may be, whether Protestant, Roman Catholic, Mohammedan, Confucian or other, people are better when enjoying the right to worship than when denied that right. They are better citizens of their own land and better neighbors to the citizens of other lands. Mexico, with a preponderance of her people denied the right to worship in their temples and according to their faith, was a menace to her neighbors. In such a situation, there is always danger of an eruption with consequent danger to nearby lands.

Few of us would be willing to live in a population center, large or small, in which religious services were not held. Few of us would be willing to live in a land without a church, and we believe that there would be still fewer of us who would be willing to live in a land, or could dwell in peace and happiness in a land, in which the right to worship in the temples of our faith was denied to us, and we can see no chance for peace and happiness in a land where that right is denied to the majority of the population.

It is for this reason that we have said that the agreement reached in Mexico last Friday gives ground for thankfulness the civilized world over, for general dissatisfaction and discontent can not be felt in any land without some reflection of it the globe around.

J. T. Desbaso, a seventy-nine-year-old war veteran, and fifteen-year-old Alils Carter were married last week at Mena, Arkansas, with the consent of the bride's parents. The announcement of the marriage didn't specify either the size of the groom's pension or the possible estate he has accumulated.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, and Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, have issued statements in laudation of the accomplishments of the Democratic minority in the senate during the first sixty days of the special session. The rare novelty of praise of the Democratic senate minority may give the two statements appeal to those careless about what they may believe.

Ambassador Dawes told London newspaper men that he had never served liquor in his home in this country and saw no reason to change the custom now. That settles it. Never again will he be able to pass as a "good, law-abiding citizen" in the face of a statement like that.

It has been discovered that a Chicago attorney hired a golf professional to teach him how to make eighteen holes in eighty or less and paid him $10,000 for three months of daily instructions in order that he might win a five-dollar bet from a friend. That's Americanism for you!

Following a careful survey by scientists showing that the falls of Niagara have receded but seven miles in 30,000 years, the announcement is made that they will not be drained by erosion within the next 2,000 years and that the Canadian Horseshoe falls will be more graceful and beautiful two centuries hence than they are today. Why should the future honeymooners worry?

No Marion county sheep were killed by dogs, last week, which goes to show canine appreciation of present-day prices, the high intelligence of the dogs no doubt causing them to realize that sheep are too valuable to be killed with quotations what they are in the sheep market.

The former valet of Tom Mix, arrested on suspicion of having stolen $75,000 in cash and securities belonging to Mix and released from custody subsequent to a confession of guilt made by a negro arrested for the crime, has sued the cowboy for $25,000 for slander. There's one thing which may be said for hard-working spreaders of joy and sunshine in paragraphs; it is seldom, if ever, that their riches ever prove sources of embarrassment and annoyance to them.

Disapproved by over 1,500,000 of their comrades, who remained at home, only 2,000 French war veterans appeared in the parade in Paris, Sunday, which was advertised in advance as a "mighty protest" against ratification of the American and British debt accords. At this distance it looks as though the overwhelming majority of the French politis have more sense than the politicians over there.

BEARING DOWN.

Ivy and Oak Poisoning.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

There are many diseases and affections which are seasonal. For instance, you suffer from ivy poisoning only during the warm season. This is true also of oak poisoning. Of course these two plants are very much alike. Oak grows in California and the Pacific states. Ivy is met in the Middle and Eastern states.

The symptoms of ivy and oak poisoning are similar. They begin with an intense itching of the skin. This is followed by burning, a rash and very shortly the formation of small papules close together.

The second day these papules or pimple-like spots become swollen and inflamed. The skin is extremely sore to the touch. Later the blisters break or their own accord, or are rubbed by the scratching, permitting the fluid to escape. This appears to spread the poison, passing the infection to other parts of the body.

In severe cases the pus may take the place of the fluid.

I have told you the more serious side of poison ivy. There is little or no excuse for any one to suffer all these symptoms. If proper care of the skin is taken after exposure to this plant, there need be no violent symptoms.

If you are warm and perspiring, you are more susceptible than otherwise. The pores of the skin are open and infection easily occurs.

The first thing to do if you have been exposed to poison ivy is to wash thoroughly the hands, face or other exposed parts. Use plenty of strong soap, such as ordinary laundry soap. Baking soda in strong solution is also beneficial.

Probably the most healing solution to use to reduce the itching and swelling is grindelia robusta. To one part of the extract use four or five parts of water.

Applications of vaseline or boric acid salve form a covering protecting the affected parts. This guards against the irritation caused by exposure to the air.

Sometimes the itching yields to applications of hyposulphite of soda. A tablespoonful to a cup of water will make a mixture which may be mopped on the irritated places.

Editorial Opinion.

GIVING A LITTLE GROUND.

Adoption by congress of a resolution postponing until May 1 the maturity date on the $100,000,000 French war supplies account indicates that our official policy on the war debts is undergoing modification. There was considerable storming and stewing in both houses when this resolution recommended by the president was offered, but little actual opposition.

The resolution also provides in effect that this account will be wiped out entirely in the event that France ratifies the Mellon-Beringer agreement before August 1. Whether anything substantial is being given to France in this way is a controversial issue.

When the agreement was drawn the obligations incurred during the war and those incurred afterward were considered separately. The fact that special provision was made for the payment for war supplies sold to the French, indicates that Secretary Mellon expected this government to collect what the agreement stipulated plus something additional for these supplies.

It is now made to appear that the supplies account was to be absorbed in the general debt account, and that acceptance of the agreement will involve payment for supplies sold after the war as well as for credit extended while the war was in progress. Even so the war supplies account is probably scaled down along with the other, and France is thus offered a real inducement to accept the Beringer agreement.

The resolution adopted by congress has probably an important international bearing. Premier Poincare faces a fight on the Young reparations program. France is not entirely pleased with her share of the payments to be made under it. A concession from this country with respect to her obligations to us might reconcile her to the modified reparations settlement.

The administration probably would refuse to admit that it is playing the game with Europe much more freely than the preceding administration did. The concession made while the reparations conference was in progress on army of occupation payments involved no great sum of money, but it was a concession nevertheless and it reflected a disposition of the administration to give a little ground in order to promote the amicable adjustment of international financial problems.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CIVIL SERVICE DANGERS.

Chief of the recommendations made by the National Civil Service Reform league at its annual meeting in New York City was the proposal that all federal administrative offices, except cabinet members and their immediate assistants, be put into the civil service and under the merit system. By that means, the league urges that the "barter and sale of federal offices" can be eliminated.

Such a proposal, made in 1890 would have aroused a tremendous wave of enthusiasm over the country, and political party leaders would have had to come out for or against it. Today it scarcely causes a ripple of interest.

The reason is not far to seek. The merit system has been applied to about three-fourths of all the administrative positions in the federal service, extensions having been made from time to time ever since the original law of 1887. To date the results have not proved to be revolutionary. The work of administration is done quietly and with some effectiveness, but at a tremendous cost, for no man or woman works at a rapid pace when he knows that his job is secure for life as long as he refrains from becoming intoxicated on duty.

The merit system, in short, has its merits, but it is not so far superior to patronage that there is any immediate need for extending it. On the contrary, the Civil Service Reform league might well spend its time and ingenuity in finding out what is wrong with the system of examinations and promotions in the ranks of the civil service as now in operation. There they could do a useful service perhaps. But there is no need for agitation to extend a merit system so full of flaws as that now in vogue.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

News dispatches told us some days ago that Sinclair, in jail in Washington, did not seem greatly disturbed because he faces another sentence when the present term expires. One can understand why he doesn't mind so much. He is probably having the most complete rest, the most perfect relaxation he has had in a score of years. Not a bad idea to be confined in jail for a few months and be free from telephones, typewriters, radios, and free from the necessity of seeing people you do not want to see. Free from worrying about what tomorrow's weather is going to be and how much it is going to interfere with your plans. Free from all sorts of worries and irritations. A good case can be made for a prison vacation for a limited period.

One now listens to Wickersham as an expert. He is chairman of the president's crime commission. Wickersham says the difficulty of enforcing law is due chiefly to the ignoring of certain laws which are objectionable to certain citizens. He says:

"The peculiar characteristic of present conditions arise out of the fact that part of the community who have most at stake in the preservation of law and order, themselves are preaching and practicing an open disregard for certain laws to which they object, apparently without any concern for the effect upon maintenance of the law in general, especially upon laws designed for the protection of life and property.

"One of the matters which the national commission on law observance and enforcement will investigate is the amount which private interests pay for police protection, in addition to that furnished by governments, local, state and national.

"The church formerly exercised a restraining influence upon the lawless tendencies of certain elements in communities. Perhaps it still does to some extent, but no one can fail to realize that its authority has been greatly weakened if not destroyed."

Forty or fifty daily newspapers are taken at the White House. Clippings bearing on what the president and the administration are doing are turned over to Mr. Hoover. He watches the newspapers. The people watch the newspapers. The principal medium between the people and their government is the newspaper. There is nothing else so closely related to the situation. Nothing else will do. A Democratic or Republican form of government is not possible without the cooperation of newspapers. People must be kept in touch with the centralized power or we have no workable democracy.

What newspapers say editorially is not vital. Their printing of the news is always important.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, June 25—There are a half dozen explorers' clubs in New York composed of the hardy adventurers who at the slightest excuse slam down their desks and set off for queer hidden corners of the world. They are not cliff dwellers by choice, but by force of circumstances.

At intervals they hold dinners and discuss their roamings. Strangely, most of them have the appearance of plodding book-keepers. Steffanson might be a third baseman in Dubuque. Will Beebe a county surveyor in Oshkosh. Isolation has marked them with a calmness of manner and placidity of spirit.

Many lesser Nomads are usually brought back to the family fireside by pressing family ties and in this martyrdom have no interest whatever in anything save setting off again. Chained dreamers, they chafe at the restrictions of a conventional world. They walk alone in parks at night.

Now and then they strike off domestic shackles and vanish completely and are remembered only through the submerged and fleeting lines "Missing from Home" in the daily newspapers. Four hundred disappeared from the metropolis in this fashion last year.

They rarely travel familiar paths in fear of recognition. They are found combing the Carribees, sheltered in native huts in Tahaiti, a beach derelict of the South seas or isolated in some God-forsaken spot along the dinky Uganda railroad in South Africa. They ask nothing, give nothing—and drift the days away.

This odd wanderlust does not touch only those in mediocre jobs and enticed by the glamour of travel. It inoculates men in high place who could retire in luxury. They ignore hardships if they can be migratory birds always on the wing. The incessant demand is for change.

New faces, new scenes, new seas, like the fabled Lorelei lure them on and on to the outer rims of civilization. Cities stifle and they crave that existence encompassed in a breech clout, a menu of ripe fruit and a bed in perhaps a camphor tree beneath the stars.

An evening gown worn the night before caused her husband to move to his club and everybody in the dining-room had tittered when she entered wearing her new frock. She was asked to go into a dressing-room and try on the gown again. She did and it developed she had been wearing the creation, cut low in the back, wrongside foremost, all evening.

Niels Gade—Composer.

BY COZETTE DOUGLASS.

Niels Wilhelm Gade, who has been called the founder of the Scandinavian school of music, was the only son of an instrument maker. Gade was born in Copenhagen on February 22, 1817, and was destined to follow his father's trade. However, violin lessons and a frequent attendance at the theatre, served to strengthen his determination to become a musician.

He was placed under the instruction of Weyschall, then the leader of the court orchestra, and later under Wyse and Berggreen, but he was, to a great extent, self taught in theory.

At the age of sixteen, Gade appeared as a concert violinist. In 1841 his overture "Nachklange von Ossian" took first prize at the competition of the Copenhagen Music society. This also won for the young composer the attention of the king, who gave Gade a stipend which enabled him to go to Leipzig and Italy. In 1842 the performance of one of Gade's symphonies by Mendelssohn paved the way for his favorable reception in Leipzig in 1842.

Gade's association with Schumann and Mendelssohn undoubtedly fanned his genius to a glowing flame. During Mendelssohn's absence Gade repeatedly conducted the Gewandhaus concerts and on Mendelssohn's death, succeeded him as regular conductor.

In 1852 Gade married the daughter of the composer, J. P. E. Hartmann.

Gade wielded a commanding influence over musical affairs in the Danish capital and was honored by the title of Professor, which was conferred upon him by the king. He was also honored by the University of Cambridge.

Gade was essentially a romanticist, but his music is finished and polished, lyrical rather than dramatic.

Gade died in Copenhagen on December 21, 1890.

Alton Bertram Field, of Manchester, England, will receive the first Lamme award, recognizing "meritorious achievement in the development of electrical apparatus or machinery." He was chosen to be the first recipient by the Institute's committee because of his mathematical and experimental investigation of eddy current losses in large slot-wound conductors in electrical machinery.

The Lamme medal was established in honor Benjamin G. Lamme, chief engineer of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co.

Professor C. F. Scott, of Sheffield Scientific school, Yale university, will present the medal and W. J. Dawson will act as toastmaster. Short talks will be given by R. F. Schuchardt, president of the Institute, B. A. Behrend, Professor Elihu Thompson and Mr. Field.

NEW SHOE SOLES 10c INSTEAD OF $1.25
Inventor Offers Big Can Free
An amazing new product has been invented by O. E. Mothershead which make it possible for any man, woman, or even a child, to repair worn-out shoe soles in 3 minutes. The cost of repairing a pair of shoes by this remarkable new method is less than 10c. Actual users claim even better results than the old way which costs ten times as much. Re-Sole is simply spread over the old shoe like butter on bread. It fills up holes, hardens and covers the sole with a tough, smooth surface that looks like leather and resists the hardest wear. It is waterproof, flexible and retains the comfort of the old shoe.
Mr. Mothershead is making an offer whereby anyone may secure for Free Trial a full size sample of this astonishing product (enough to resole 10 shoes) without cost. Simply write him at Suite 675 F2, Garner Bldg., Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Mothershead is also making an attractive offer to agents by which they can make $10 to $15 a day on this fast selling new product. Be sure to write him today. —Adv.

The Maison Benelli was like that ... to all purposes one large ... laying few secrets from one ... If the personnel of the fam ... a flute of pretty constant ... selection was not Madame Benelli was known from coast to coast for her indulgence she extended to ... ple of the theater when they were out of work and unable to meet their bills promptly in natural consequence few of her rooms ever lacked a ledger for one night and Tormaye ... ence on the financial responsibility of his kind to the contrary notwithstanding the Benelli had managed to save up a quite respectable fortune out of her profits

Despite the costly upkeep of a highly scented husband who though otherwise indifferently decorature was never known to turn his hand over in the house unless it held tableware or a deck of cards and for all of the pilferings of the horde of hangers-on who staffed the establishment Madame Benelli when she died was found to have been the sole owner of rather more high grade apartment houses in New York than many a cloakroom boy in a Fifth Avenue hotel could boast

To do them justice the callers were honest enough about their paying intentions and ready to repay its satisfaction in kind. Having learned that the Munds flat had duly been inspected judged adequate and taken under lease for the several months' duration of Miss Munds absence on tour they disbursed their own newsfreely. Tormaye it transpired was still preserving a receptive attitude toward the advances of an exceptionally coquettish contract but confidently expected to succumb to its attractions not later than days after tomorrow. Miss Desmond had decided to leave the American stage flat on its back for a while to teach it a lesson while she took a flier in pictures—had what she called an honest contract to exhibit calling for her services for four weeks at a fair salary in the Long Island City studios of a film company

She was appropriately exhilarated and disposed to believe that the lean years of her apprenticeship were ended. Belasco she alleged and indeed seemed to believe wanted her for a part in the new piece he would be putting on about the first of February with Fanny Etoile as the star from which stepping stone of achievement a very real one in the reckoning of Broadway it would be Mona was solidly persuaded only one more step to a place in stellar ranks for herself

She was so supremely confident that she even went so far as to promise Jennifer to make early opportunity to put in a good word for her with Belasco himself—everybody said the governor was going to do another piece as soon as he had launched the Etoile show

One other bit of news she forgot till the moment of her leaving when she turned back to the threshold after Tormaye had followed her out into the hall and called over Tabor's shoulder to Jennifer

Oh Jenny I most forgot to tell you * * * Whom do you think I ran today? An old friend of yours I was waiting for Nigel in the lobby of the Ritmore when he walked past and I hooted and waved my wooden leg and he stopped and spoke to me. It's ages and ages since I saw him last and I'll either forgotten how good looking he was or he's grown so much handsomer a person hardly know him. Don't you think so? Or maybe you haven't seen much of him lately either

Tabor marveled at the cool incongruity of a voice that sounded behind him at which the owner he for his part dared not look

Who

Lance Fairless of course. Don't you remember * * * But of course you did! You used to play around with him a terrible lot

I haven't the pleasant nonchalant voice of Jennifer responded to Mona's questioning. seen anything of Lance for some time now"

That's what he said——

Oh did he ask about me?

I didn't give him a chance. Mona gurgled— I was simply bursting to tell him about your being married You ought to be seen his face Jenny —I could've knocked him over with a feather. Tabby ought to feel awfully flattered, to think would give a looker like Lance the chuck to marry him Now don't you go getting jealous Tabby. I'm only teasing. Good night all

She pulled the door to behind her left those two staring

Seeing how dismay whitened Jennifer's face flew its signals in her darkling eyes. Tabor was sensitive to a time that called for measures sharply counter irritant. True that the girl wasn't of any common hysterical type the tensile strength of her nervous organization was none the less he was sure being too finely tried

It wasn't for nothing she had purchased that self-contained manner which for weeks had like a glaze of ice covered profundities of desolation as black as death—he well knew who had gone down too into that purgatorre how bitter bleak and black

To him however life had been more kind to him had sent his illness like an opiate whose smart passing has left him somehow though but temporarily it might be immunized against the ills of empty longing for days forever lost while Jennifer had known never a moment of ease from heartache but when she slept—more at all events than those possible few when forgetfulness of a sort had been won of devoted attendance at his bedside

So now when this new alarm drove her to him with a tragic countenance and hands in a panic flutter Tabor brought her up with one look a half smile of depreciation at once whimsical and cynical—lifting his brows lightly and his shoulders at the same time drawing down the corners of his mouth

Well! she cried in a gust — what are you going to do now

Do Tabor smile business with his watch Why go to bed I suppose What else is there to do

You know what I mean It is not too late to reconsider Tabor Nothing can stop us from giving up this crazy thing we're trying to get away with

My dear girl! Whatever are you talking about?

Oh Tabor! She caught his arm imploringly You know you'd better cut all this out * * * It's no good —I knew it wouldn't be Her voice broke * * *

I'm no good Tabor—no good to you no good to myself no good to anybody The best thing you can do is chuck me as quick as you can— I'm just a Jonah

But Jenny —Tabor put up a patient hand to those that clung to him — you're letting go all at once for no reason I can fathom

I'm not Jennifer dropped heavily into a chair hung a heavy head over arms that clutched the far edge of the marble table top

It's just come home to me that's all what a wild hopeless dream I've been doping myself with I knew it all along but I couldn't help trying to make it come true I so wanted a little peace of mind And you were so sweet and everything * * * But we can't go on now—you knew that perfectly well

Tabor moved to her side before replying Why not

But don't you understand She lifted a look all tremulous Now Lance knows——

Knows what Jenny

Where I'm living and how— I mean that I'm posing as married to you—'

To a Mr. Drew I believe And he does not know you're merely posing More than that what conceivable concern is it of Mr Fairless

The girl seemed not to follow misgivings like little flames worried by a wind played on in the background of her stare He'll think it funny—

What if he does He will hardly make an excuse of that to trouble you again

I'm not worrying about myself It's you I'm afraid for

Oddly enough—d'you know?—I thought as much Appreciation spoke more openly in an understanding nod But why? What have I to fear from Fairless?

You don't suppose for a minute Mona told him what she said just now without telling him everything she knew, do you? You don't know that chatterbox Lance isn't precisely a dumbbell, either You can bet Mona told him she calls you Tabby for short and what you look and talk like and how I brought you here half-dead and out of your mind about the time Tabor Wynne disappeared It's no good kidding ourselves Lance won't think all that queer enough to be worth looking into

'Suppose he does * * *"

'Why' you don't want to be caught —like this—do you?'

'I don't much believe I shall be Not by Mr Fairless In any event I rather think that's the last thing he'd wish for to dig me out of my decent grave with his own hands As long as Tabor Wynne stays dead he's comfortably out of the way and the world wags well enough for Lance Fairless He will hardly I think set out deliberately to borrow trouble

The girl blankly frowned You think he won't tell—her

I do think just that Jenny"

'But —she had a bewildered flutter—' but if they're so madly in—so mad about each other—surely they must want—'"

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Dicky Offers To Prepare Harry for Reading of Marion's Letter

TO get hold of Harry Underwood before Lillian woke and warn him of her obsession concerning Charles Owen was an easier thing to plan than to accomplish That he was still in the tiger trap down stairs watching the man whom he suspected being a lookout for the desperado members of his mobile who had sworn Prince Georges death I knew And I also knew that under no circumstances could I go near that room which was being so artfully prepared as a lure for the men bent upon murdering the young heir to the throne of Ireen

There was but one thing to do and that was to appeal to Dicky and how I disliked asking him to do anything for me I thanked my particular little Jess when I saw that he was seated by the window reading so far from our internal and romantic quartet that there could not hear my murmured appeal to him even if they were not engrossed in a game of bridge

I crossed the room and leaned over his chair with the air of careless cordiality which we always assume toward each other in public

Oh the very latest' I exclaimed Tell me do you think a ghost writer did it or is she the real goods in fathers

Before he could answer I murmured quickly

Must see you at once Our apartment

He took my cue quickly laughed to cover my words

A ghost writer is my guess. But it isn't worth wasting time on from any standpoint I'm going to quit right here

He closed the book rose and stretched his arms.

I'm going to beat you to it he announced in tones sufficiently loud to attract the attention of the bridge players No I haven all my unpacking done but I'll finish it right away if you'll come along and help me

I'll be charmed I laughed and as we passed the players Mary wrinkled her nose at me

Attagirl Auntie Madge!' she said 'Just you keep Uncle Dicky's nose to the grindstone He's like all the men—lazy things—there isn't one of em but needs some woman after him with a hickory switch

The other three looked up at her sally and I had a good view of their separate reactions to the nonsense Noel patently recognized it as such and laughed promptly with evident enjoyment. Prince Georges also laughed indulgently but not before a puzzled questioning expression had appeared in his eyes an expression which lingered despite his mirth But Princess Olina's smile was distinctly supercilious and disapproving

Dicky must have seen what I did but to my relief he made no comment upon it Instead he played into my hands as soon as the door of our own apartment had closed upon us

'What's on the alleged mind ' he asked

I must see Harry before Lillian does, and without her knowing it," I told him then hurriedly explained He listened attentively to my hurried story of Marion's surprising news concerning Charles Owen and Lillian's reaction to it and nodded approvingly when I recited what I had said concerning the man

It's a good idea he smilingly quoted Tom Sawyer's aunt— Lil's nerves are shot enough without having Owen's possibilities for mischief on her mind What do you say to my taking this little job off your hands? I'll flag Harry before he comes down and warn him he's to refer to Marion's letter and then get the part I ask the principals'

Oh' if you would I'd be grateful I said

My husband looked at me curiously Look here he said a bit roughly Why didn't you come right out and ask me to see Harry for you? What's the big idea anyway? Am I such a close friend you couldn't just say you can't ask a simple favor of me

There was resentment in his voice but there was real hurt also and I answered that impetuously

You know better than that I said You always are wonderful about doing things for me

He took a quick step toward me his eyes alight But I was not to know what answer he meant to make for Harry Underwood's double knock sounded upon the door and with an annoyed little exclamation Dicky strode across the room to admit him

One can be comfortable and still be lonesome and bored

The [illegible] of its kind however with [illegible] for Tabor's wardrobe [illegible] to the clothes in [illegible] had been introduced to [illegible] elli and he had no time [illegible] tailors

[illegible] or at which he shaved [illegible] every morning a mask so [illegible] wasted that he doubted if [illegible] closest friends would know [illegible] recognition to see him. And [illegible] a number of dependable [illegible] the avenue in whose [illegible] was no more known than [illegible] acquaintance client

[illegible] ed from this that Jennifer [illegible] certain respect for the ring [illegible] home thought it was im[illegible] to the casual glance to be [illegible] from the circlet of plat[illegible] small diamonds that had predecessor. Respect, how[illegible] apparently not the only [illegible] erred in the girl [illegible] the feel of it on her finger [illegible] upon different — Tabor more [illegible] before they parted for the [illegible] orily observed Jennifer [illegible] with it as if she could not [illegible] ious of the singular bond [illegible] item of which it was the [illegible] re than once saw the gray [illegible] with thoughtfulness [illegible] his face when the girl [illegible] he wasn't looking. With this [illegible] manifesting an animation a [illegible] of spirit that was novel in [illegible] knowledge of her moods.

For the first time he heard her [illegible] aloud. Tabor was curiously [illegible] it is a weathered man [illegible] who had for the first time [illegible] many years the laughter of a happy [illegible]. He found himself both hoping [illegible] fearing to hear it again.

To [illegible] the professional Briton [illegible] did [illegible] in with Mona Desmond [illegible] the news at first hand. For in [illegible] time no soul that housed in the [illegible] Benelli was ignorant of the [illegible] fact that Jennifer Challis [illegible] queer bird of a husband she [illegible] picked up with were planning to [illegible] a furnished flat.

The Maison Benelli was like that [illegible] to all purposes one large [illegible] having few secrets from one [illegible]. If the personnel of the fam[illegible] was in a state of pretty constant [illegible] order was not Madame Benelli was known from coast to coast for the indulgence she extended to people of the theater when they were out of work and unable to meet their rents promptly in natural consequence few of her rooms ever lacked a lodger for one night and Tormay's reflections on the financial responsibility of his kind to the contrary not withstanding the Benelli had managed to save up a quite respectable fortune out of her profits.

Despite the costly upkeep of a high class seeming husband who though otherwise undistinguished decorature was never known to turn his hand over in the house unless it held tableware or a deck of cards and for all of the pilferings of the horde of hangers-on who swarmed the establishment Madame Benelli when she died was found to have been the sole owner of rather more high grade apartment houses in New York than many a cloakroom boy in a fifth or hotel could boast.

To do them justice the callers were honest enough about their prime interest and read no reproach nor satisfaction in kind. Having learned that the Munds flat had duly been inspected, judged adequate and taken under lease for the several months duration of Miss Munds absence on tour they disbursed their own news freely. Formay it transpired was still preserving a receptive attitude toward the advances of an exceptionally coquettish contract but confidently expected to succumb to its attractions no later than days after tomorrow. Miss Desmond had decided to leave the American stage flat on its back for a while to teach it a lesson while she took a flier in picture — but what she called an honest contract to exhibit calling for her services for four weeks at a fair salary in the Long Island City studios of a film company.

She was appropriately exhilarated and disposed to believe that the seven years of her apprenticeship were ended. Peluseo she alleged and indeed seemed to believe wanted her for a part in the new piece he would be putting on about the first of February with Fanny Ftolle as the star from which stepping stone of achievement a very real one in the reckoning of Broadway it would be Mona was solidly persuaded only one more step to a place in stellar ranks for herself.

She was so supremely confident that she even went so far as to promise Jennifer to make early opportunity to put in a good word for her with Belasco himself—everybody said the governor was going to do another piece as soon as he had launched the Ftolle show.

One other bit of news she forgot till the moment of her leaving when she turned back to the threshold after Tormay had followed her out into the hall and called over Tabor's shoulder to Jennifer.

Oh Jenny I most forgot to tell you * * * Whom do you think I saw today? An old friend of yours I was waiting for Nigel in the lobby of the Biltmore when he walked past and I hooted and waved my wooden leg and he stopped and spoke to me. It's the first time he's said a word to me since I saw him last and I'd either forgotten how good looking he was or he's grown so much handsomer a person I hardly know him. Don't you think so? Or maybe you haven't seen much of him lately either.

Tabor marveled at the cool inconsequential tone that sounded behind him at who so owner he for his part dared not look.

Who

Lance Fairless of course. Don't you remember * * * But of course you do. You used to play around with him a terrible lot.

In the pleasant non-committal voice of Jennifer responded to Mona's questioning seen anything of Lance for some time now.

That's what he said——

'Oh' did he ask about me?

I didn't give him a chance Mona gurgled— I was simply bursting to tell him about your being married. You ought to've seen his face Jenny —I could've knocked him over with a feather. Tabby ought to feel awfully flattered to think you'd give a looker like Lance the chuck to marry him. Now don't you go getting jealous, Tabby. I'm only teasing. Good night all.

She pulled the door to behind her left those two staring.

Seeing how dismay whitened Jennifer's face, flew its signals in her darkling eyes. Tabor was sensitive to a time that called for measures sharply counter irritant. True that the girl wasn't of any common hysterical type, the tensile strength of her nervous organization was none the less, he was sure being too nicely tried.

It wasn't for nothing she had purchased that self-contained manner which for weeks had like a glaze of ice covered profundities of desolation as black as death—he well knew what had gone down too into that purgatorr how bitter bleak and black!

To him however, life had been more kind to him had sent his illness like an opiate whose sway passing has left him somehow though but temporarily it might be immunized against the ilk of empty longing for days forever lost, while Jennifer had known never a moment of ease from heartache but when she slept—more at all events than those possible few when forgetfulness of a sort had been won of devoted attendance at his bedside.

So now when this new alarm drove her to him with a tragic countenance and hands in a panic flutter Tabor brought her up with one look a half smile of deprecation at once whimsical and cynical—lifting his brows lightly and his shoulders at the same time drawing down the corners of his mouth.

Well! she cried in a gust— what are you going to do now.

Do Tabor made business with his watch. Why go to bed I suppose. What else is there to do.

You know what I mean. It is not too late to reconsider. Tabor. Nothing can stop us from giving up this crazy thing were trying to get away with.

My dear girl! Whatever are you talking about.

Oh Tabor! She caught his arm imploringly. You know you'd better cut all this out * * * It's no good —I knew it wouldn't be. Her voice broke * * *

'I'm no good Tabor—no good to you no good to myself no good to anybody. The best thing you can do is chuck me as quick as you can—I'm just a Jonah.

But Jenny —Tabor put up a patient hand to those that clung to him — you're letting go all at once for no reason I can fathom.

I'm not Jennifer dropped heavily into a chair hung a heavy head over arms that clutched the far edge of the marble table top.

It's just come home to me that's all what a wild hopeless dream I've been doping myself with I knew it all along but I couldn't help trying to make it come true. I so wanted a little peace of mind. And you were so sweet and everything * * * But we can't go on now—you knew that perfectly well.

Tabor moved to her side before replying. Why not?

But don't you understand? She lifted a look all tremulous. Now Lance knows——

Knows what Jenny?

Where I'm living and how— I mean that I'm posing as married to you—"

To a Mr. Drew I believe. And he does not know you're merely posing. More than that what concerns him is it of Mr. Fairless?

The girl seemed not to follow misgivings like little flames worried by a wind played on in the background of her stare. He'll think it funny—

What if he does. He will hardly make an excuse of that to trouble you again.

I'm not worrying about myself it's you I'm afraid for.

'Oddly enough—I know —I thought as much. Appreciation spoke more openly in an understanding nod. But why? What have I to fear from Fairless?

You don't suppose for a minute Mona told him what she said just now without telling him everything she knew, do you? You don't know that chatterbox Lance isn't precisely a dumbbell, either. You can bet Mona told him she calls you Tabby for short and what you look and talk like and how I brought you here half-dead and out of your mind about the time Tabor Wynne disappeared. It's no good kidding ourselves I sure won't think all that queer enough to be worth looking into."

'Suppose he does * * *'

'Why! you don't want to be caught —like this—do you?'

'I don't much believe I shall be. Not by Mr. Fairless in any event. I rather think that's the last thing he'd wish for to dig me out of my decent grave with his own hands. As long as Tabor Wynne stays dead he's comfortably out of the way and the world wags well enough for Lance Fairless. He will hardly I think set out deliberately to borrow trouble.'

The girl blankly frowned. 'You think he won't tell—her.

'I do think just that Jenny.'

'But —she had a bewildered flutter—'but if they're so madly in—so mad about each other—surely they must want—''

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Dicky Offers To Prepare Harry for Reading of Marion's Letter

TO get hold of Harry Underwood before Lillian waked and warn him of her obsession concerning Charles Owen was an easier thing to plan than to accomplish. That he was still in the tiger trap down stairs watching the man whom he suspected being a lookout for the desperado members of Kemillos who had sworn Prince Georges death I knew. And I also knew that under no circumstances could I go up the room which was being so artfully prepared as a lure for the men bent upon murdering the young heir to the throne of Iraz.

There was but one thing to do and that was to appeal to Dicky much as I disliked asking him to do anything for me. I thanked my particular little Joss when I saw that he was seated by the window reading so far from our international romantic quartet that they could not hear my murmured appeal to him even if they were not engrossed in a game of bridge.

I crossed the room and leaned over an chair with the air of careless cordiality which we always assume to ward each other in public.

Oh, the very latest' I exclaimed. Tell me do you think a ghost writer did it or is she the real goods in authors.

Before he could answer I murmured quickly.

Must see you at once. Our apartment.

He took my cue quickly laughed to cover my words.

A ghost writer is my guess. But it isn't worth wasting time on from any standpoint. I'm going to quit right here.

He closed the book rose and stretched his arms.

I'm going to bed you to it he announced in tones sufficiently loud to attract the attention of the bridge players. No I haven' all my unpacking done but I'll finish it right away if you'll come along and help me.'

'I'll be charmed I laughed and as we passed the players, Mary wrinkled her nose at me.

Atta—girl Auntie Madge!' she said. Just you keep Uncle Dicky's nose to the grindstone. He's like all the men—lazy things—there isn't one of 'em but needs some woman after him with a hickory switch.

The other three looked up at her sally, and I had a good view of their separate reactions to the nonsense. Noel patently recognized it as such and laughed promptly with evident enjoyment. Prince Georges also laughed indulgently but not before a puzzled questioning expression had appeared in his eyes an expression which lingered despite his mirth. But Princess Olma's smile was distinctly supercilious and disapproving.

Dicky must have seen what I did, but to my relief he made no comment upon it. Instead he played into my hands as soon as the door of our own apartment had closed upon us.

'What's on the alleged mind' he asked.

'I must see Harry before Lillian does, and without her knowing it," I told him then hurriedly explained. He listened attentively to my hurried story of Marion's surprising news concerning Charles Owen and Lillian's reaction to it and nodded approvingly when I related what I had said concerning the man.

It's a good lie he smilingly quoted Tom Sawyer's aunt— Ills nervous are short enough with us has Owen's possibilities for mischief on her mind. What do you say to my taking this little job off your hands? I'll fling Harry before he comes down and warn him he's to listen to Marion's letter and then act the part of a skeptic convincingly.'

Oh' if you would I'd be grateful I said.

My husband looked at me curiously.

Look here he said a bit roughly 'Why didn't you come right out and ask me to see Harry for you? What's the big idea anyway? Am I such a clumsy an boor that you can't ask a simple favor of me?

There was resentment in his voice but there was a hurt also and I answered that impetuously.

'You know better than that I said. You always are wonderful about doing things for me.

He took a quick step toward me his eyes alight. But I was not to know what answer he meant to make for Harry Underwood's double knock sounded upon the door and with an annoyed little exclamation Dicky strode across the room to admit him.

One can be comfortable and still be lonesome and bored.

Waiting for Sunday

PITY the poor working girl

Imagine the desire that wells in her heart as she watches these glorious youngsters and less glorious loafers as they make up parties and dash out to Crystal Lake or some other nearby swimming place for an hour or two of swimming, wading, diving or whatever the aquatic powers of the pleasure seeker might be.

There sits the poor stenog in her office sweltering beside a window through which the sun pours all day long wishing for only one stray whiff of breeze. The girl behind the counter has no pleasant job of standing through the day not very busy because everyone else is some place cooling off, and longing for 5:30 to come so that the store will close and she can join her luckier companions at the lake.

Happy girl and lucky boy, with nothing to do but find ways of cooling off while their less fortunate sisters and brothers grind away to earn the weekly pay envelope.

But at the end of the week when happier, the boy or girl with a well filled pocketbook or the pleasure boy and girl who have spent their folks nickels to go swimming and are wondering where the next dime is coming from?

For after all the office girl has all day Sunday to loll in the hot sands or paddle in the water, and get her much desired sun tan.

Vanished Decorations

DO the girls realize just how much lipstick they waste every day during the 765 allotted on the calendar.

Have you ever noticed coffee cups after the sweet young flapper or the tired business woman has left her lunch or dinner. Next time look at the ring of red on the edge of the cup.

Soda straws, coke straws, etc, also get their full complement of raspberry blush natural rose, and endless other shades and variations of the gooey stuff.

Handkerchiefs of some of the young ladies look as if the owner had cut her finger, after they have been passed across the lips several times during these hot days.

This paste rouge and lipstick rouge these days accounts for the high blood pressure finger tips of so many of its users. The finger tips look as if the owner had been using a leaky fountain pen filled with red ink.

Success in Sight

MARION'S new street sweeping machine shows promise of performing valuable service. First results of the recently purchased motor device which somewhat resembles a lumbering tank as it travels over the thoroughfares indicate that satisfactory results are to be obtained from its operation.

If this new device does become a permanent and successful feature of the street department, it will accomplish something that similar machines tried out in the past failed to bring about.

Mechanical street cleaning contraptions operated here in former years were comparatively short lived. After a year or two in use for some reason these machines were relegated to the junk heap a dead loss to the city.

One of the former machines, purchased at a rather high figure was a street flusher which was expected to keep the pavements washed as spick and span as the proverbial kitchen floor. The flusher did do satisfactory work for a time but there were some drawbacks which finally necessitated placing it in the discard.

One of the main objections was the vast amount of water used in the cleaning operations. Not only was this a drain on the city supply but there were some sections of the city where the sewer system could not carry off the flow. Sewer lines became clogged with refuse and water held back by the barricades found its way into basements of homes and business blocks. It became necessary to take the flusher out of service to avoid damage suits threatened in complaints from property owners.

MARION'S MOVIE ORDINANCE PRAISED

New York Expert Compliments Local Officials on License Regulations

F. H. Richardson, of New York City, lauded as one of the country's [illegible] authorities on motion picture [illegible], regards Marion's system of [illegible] regulations as one of exceptional merit. This was indicated in a talk given by Mr. Richardson at the Palace theater, Saturday night, when he complimented Fire Chief McFarland, the local board of public safety and city council for their part in bringing about better conditions by recent adoption of an ordinance licensing projectionists.

Mr. Richardson, accompanied by his daughter, was a visitor here Saturday and Sunday as guests of R. S. Slade and H. J. Seckel, projectionists at the Palace theater. Saturday night, through courtesy of the Palace management, Mr. Richardson was granted use of the theater after the regular show for an hour's lecture on sound projection.

Illustrations were flashed upon the screen so that some of the more intricate parts used in sound projection could be better explained. He also had a reel of movietone film giving a five-minute talk by William Canavan, president of the Projectionists International Alliance. Mr. Canavan's talk was on the importance of the projectionist of today and his part in the motion picture industry, more so since the advent of sound.

Besides the projectionists and managers, there were a few other local people present. Visitors attended from Dayton, Bucyrus, Upper Sandusky and Delaware.

Mr. Richardson and daughter are making a trip from New York to the West Coast and return, making stops at important cities along the way. They left Marion Sunday noon for Dayton where they were to be the guests of the local projectionists and Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and daughter of the National Cash Register Co.

FOXX REPORTED TO PARK BARE-FOOT IN FIRST "PRO" CONTEST

Sensational First-Sacker Did Not Wear Shoes In Early Days

BY FRANK G MENKE

HAVE you heard the story of Jimmy Foxx and how Connie Mack I am possessed of one of the greatest all around players the game has produced in a dozen seasons

It carries back through seven years —this story of Jimmy Foxx—into a day and date when Frank Baker the old home run king then managing a minor league club was accosted by a boy of 18 tall ungainly bashful and barefooted

Ain't looking' for a—n—ball player are you mister asked the boy timidly

Baker looked him over carefully

What do you play

Most anything—but I guess I ain't so good at pitchin was the answer

Well, you come out to the park tomorrow and I'll see what you can do, said Baker

Reports Barefooted

Jimmy Foxx reported for work the next day—barefooted

Where's your shoes? demanded Baker

Shoes? Why—ah—I don't wear em—not when I play

Here's when you change your ways And Baker hunted around until he found brogans to fit the boy It was a little tough for the kid for a while shoes made him awkward until he became accustomed to them After which Baker tried the kid out at third There he stayed

When the season was over Baker communicated with Mack, his old chieftain

I've got a boy who will be a star within a few years he said You can have him now—if you want him If not, somebody else will grab him and he's a $100 000 ball player in the making

Mack Signs Him

Mack signed Foxx and farmed him out to Providence because he felt the the boy was too young to stand up under big league gaffing at that time

You're a third baseman aren't you? asked the Providence manager

Yes sir if you want me to be replied Jimmy Foxx But I can catch, too and play first base and I can outfield But I ain't much at pitching

Plays First

I need a first baseman more than I do a third baseman said the manager So he put Foxx at first and the boy's work was brilliant

One day the team ran out of healthy and uncrippled catchers So Foxx went back of the plate and played like a veteran And all the while whether he was stepping or guarding sacks or running the outfield, he was hitting at a terrific clip

Eventually Mack recalled him He kept the boy on the bench for practically a complete season Then decided the kid had learned the big league tricks he let him make his major debut in 1925

Big Gun

Foxx was one of the mightiest guns of the Athletics attack last year he rated among the stars when he served as catcher at third baseman or at first Connie moved him around here there and everywhere—and Jimmy Foxx sparkled

This year his work is even more superb Baseball experts watching this 21 year old athlete six feet tall 195 pounds of steel muscle incline to the belief that Frank Baker was most conservative when he appraised Jimmy Foxx as a $100 000 beauty

Epic Crew From Columbia Wins Regatta

Their Pet Jinxes

Certain Pitchers Are Poison to Well-Known Hitters, While Certain Teams Have Indian Sign on Some of Star Twirlers

THE INDIAN SIGN
ONE OF TH BEST TWIRLERS IN TH A.L.
TIMMY HAS BEEN ABLE TO BEAT TH YANKEES JUST ONE CAME—
Herb Pennock OF TH' YANKEES
Al THOMAS OF TH' WHITE SOX
WHEN HE'S RIGHT HERE CAN WIN AGAINST ALMOST ANY CLUB BUT HE'S LOST MOST OF TH TILTS HE'S STARTED AGAINST TH INDIANS IN TH' CLEVELAND BALL YARD
GUILL

BY QUINN HALL

You often hear about jinxes in the great national pastime Certain pitchers are poison to some of our well known hitters George Uhle for instance seems to have the Indian sign on so great a personage as Babe Ruth The Detroit flinger isn't even afraid of the great Bam!

And the flingers in their turn have their own little pet jinxes When you see them coolly winding up out there on the hill you may not know it but many times they have the little jinx devils squatting on their shoulders ready to have haw em on the least provocation

Two Puzzlers

The Yankees will probably agree that two of the toughest pitchers in the American league are Jack Quinn of the Athletics and Red Faber of the White Sox—a pair of vanishing spit ballers From the trouble they've caused the world's champions fellows like Ruth Gehrig and Coombs are probably glad that the rule against the moist delivery was put into effect

On the other hand life would be decidedly simple if all the twirlers opposing the Yankees were like Al Thomas that White Sox flinger one of the best pitchers in the American league has a reputation for only nicking the New York club on one occasion during his career with the pile hosed Chicagoans

Senators His Jinx

Then there is the case of Lefty Grove a star with the Athletics a pet jinx to the Senators? Since he came into the league, Grove has only beaten the Washington club three times and on two of these occasions he was a relief hurler This spring, he rung up his first win over the Senators as a starting pitcher!

The Cleveland Indians have always had the Indian sign on Herb Pennock left handed pitching ace of the world champs when playing in their own back yard Even at his best Pennock just manages to lose when working against the Tribe near their own leper

However the pitching jinxes are probably debunked by the hitting jinxes and over a season the general result evens up

TURBULENT HUDSON RAISES HAVOC WITH 4 FAVORED SHELLS

Washington Finishes in Second Position, Trailing by Three Lengths

BY DAVIS J WALSH

NEW YORK June 25—It was Columbia the gem of the Hudson today to the fortunate few whose eyes were as those of the Basilisk and who therefore saw what happened in what was almost the dead of night yesterday when an epic crew from Morningside Heights won a race at Poughkeepsie that will live on through the ages and defy time to produce its equal The epic crew was Columbia which outgamed the pitch and roll of the most turbulent course a Pitch keepsie regatta has known in all history The race was the four mile varsity event for the championship of America and possibly the world Never another race produced the amazing drama of this one

A record field of nine crews started bravely and hopefully out upon the fateful journey from Krums Elbow to the finish Before the 2½ mile post was left astern one of them Massachusetts Tech had foundered with all on board At the railroad bridge another followed It was Syracuse which had gone so far and could go no further

Another quarter of a mile and Cornell was in the water struggling, mass of men and oars And the last to go down was the greatest, California the world's champions of 1928 Water logged from the three mile mark and unable to answer its helm the Bear shell finally succumbed to the inevitable within sight of the finish its heart broken crew still lashing futilely with their oars as the water rushed into their laps

Only Columbia by a miracle of watermanship was able to outride the waves Washington finishing second made the next best attempt but the Huskies were more than three lengths back and reeled in their strife as the finish was achieved Pennsylvania and Wisconsin the rankest kind of outsiders also lasted to the line in third and fifth places respectively, the Navy getting home in fourth position with signals of distress plainly flying The Navy was something of an outsider too

The point is that outsiders in the betting were insiders in the lanes This in tabloid tells the story of that boat race for those nearest the west shore escaped much of the grief that came with a turning tide the result of a delay in the start of almost 45 minutes Those on the inside were Pennsylvania the Navy Washington and Wisconsin All of them finished Those on the outside were Cornell California Columbia M I T and Syracuse Only one of them finished and this one was the winner a most impressive winner that rode out the storm with eyes front heads high and hearts wide Columbia was the double treat all weather crew of this wildest fall days on the Hudson

Undoubtedly it wasn't a fair race for all concerned Ky Ebright California coach feared the worst hours ahead of time and informed the writer that there would be plenty of hearts and backs broken by the weather before the end of the day

Staab's nurse said he spent a restful night, and that today his condition was improved though still serious.

The Staabs have two small daughters.

Program for Chautauqua, Now Complete, Includes Many High Class Features

Schedule of Attractions for Annual Entertainment Announced Today; Tickets Are Mailed to More Than 700 Persons on Pledge List

A season of five days of worthwhile, educational and entertainment features is promised Marion with the announcement today of the 1929 Chautauqua program. The program will be brought here this year through arrangements of the Marion Chautauqua organization with the Lane Independent Chautauqua Co. of Bloomington, Ill.

Two plays, a concert company, a magician, a male quartet, a group of screenaders and four notable lecturers have been scheduled for the season. It is one of the most enterprising programs ever arranged here, and an outstanding feature, the organization of a Junior Town, for children, has been added this year. This addition to the annual program is expected to attract the attention of a large number of children of the city.

Saturday afternoon, July 20, at 2:30 o'clock, the Junior Town will be founded. This will be the only activity at the Chautauqua on that day.

Official Opening

Chautauqua will officially open on Sunday, July 21, at 2:30 o'clock with a concert by the Randall Entertainers, a group of six artists. Their program will include sacred, classical and popular numbers. At 3:30 o'clock a lecture, "The Religion of Laughter," will be given by Herbert Leon Cope, humorous philosopher. His half-hour lecture will be followed by a brief session of Junior Chautauqua at 4 o'clock.

The night program will open with a lecture at 7:15 o'clock by J. H. Dickason, on "Young America at the Bat." The Randall Entertainers will close the first day of Chautauqua with a second concert.

The second day of programs will begin at 10 o'clock with a meeting of Junior Chautauqua to distribute badges and buttons and be entertained with an interesting program. The Elias Tamburitza Serenaders, made up of musicians and instruments from Jugo Slavia, will open the afternoon program with a concert.

A lecture, "India Past and Present," will be delivered by Julian B. Arnold, world traveler and author, at 7:15 o'clock Monday night. The Serenaders will present a second concert at 8:15 o'clock.

Magician's Programs

Laurant & Company, made up of the noted magician and three assistants, will give two programs, the first at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and the second at 7:45 o'clock at night. The afternoon program, "Magic Land," has been arranged as a children's program. "Magic and Mystery" is the subject of the program at night. A surprise program has been planned for 10 o'clock Tuesday morning for the Junior Chautauqua.

Three complete programs will be given Wednesday afternoon and night, beginning with a concert by the Tiffany Male Quartet, with Dorothy Haines, as accompanist, at 2:30 o'clock. The Tiffany quartet will present a second concert at 8:15 o'clock at night, following a lecture by David D. Vaughan, on the complex problems of the day, given at 7:45 o'clock. Tours of the city has been arranged as a program for Junior Chautauqua at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The children will plan and arrange a closing program for presentation at 10 o'clock Thursday morning.

Plays Final Numbers

Two plays, "Just You and I," given at 2:30 o'clock and "Eighteen" given at 7:15 o'clock, will conclude the Chautauqua season. These two plays will be given by the Elwyn Dramatic Co. with a New York cast.

SOUTHERN CROSS ON 2,000-MILE FLIGHT

Kingsford-Smith and Companions To Cross Wild Australian Country

LONDON, June 25—Capt. Charles Kingsford-Smith and three companions hopped off from Sydney, New South Wales, today on a 2,000-mile flight to Derby, in the northwestern part of Australia, on the first leg of their flight from Australia to England in the famous monoplane Southern Cross, according to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Sydney.

Undaunted by their recent privations when they were forced down in the Australian bush, isolated from the world for about 14 days, and almost died of starvation, the fliers planned a bee line course in a northwesterly direction across the continent.

Sydney is on the southeast coast of Australia. Derby is situated on a bay on the northwest coast. Between are endless miles of wild country, mountain ranges and deserts.

The fliers, however, have full confidence that the huge tri-motored Southern Cross, which flew from California to Australia with stops at Hawaii and the Fiji Islands, will bring them to the end of the first leg of their flight in safety.

From Derby, the fliers will cross the Indian ocean to Indo-China and then fly west across Asia and Europe to England, making several stops en route.

WOULD HAVE HOOVER UNITE ENFORCEMENT

Senator Watson Proposes Plan To Reorganize Entire Federal Department

WASHINGTON, June 25—President Hoover will be given carte blanche authority to reorganize the whole federal prohibition enforcement service and consolidate it under a single head, if congress approves a plan proposed today by Senator James E. Watson, Republican of Indiana, Republican leader of the senate.

Watson would have congress empower the president to take the coast guard, the border patrols and the prohibition bureau itself out of the treasury department entirely and put them all into a new bureau in the department of justice. The Indiana senator would leave all changes entirely to the president even though congress would later have to ratify the new organization.

Senator Watson declared present conditions were "unbearable" and were "undermining the moral fibre of America's youth." A lifelong dry in politics, Watson urged enforcement of the dry law to "the limit."

WILL NAME BOARD FOR COMING YEAR

Will Revise Constitution and Discuss Plans for Future

GALION, June 25—The Galion Community Chest contributors will hold a rally meeting in the Public Library Friday night at 8 o'clock. This meeting will be in effect a stockholders meeting for the election of a new board of directors. The new board will consist of 10 members and will be selected from a list of 38 already nominated. This board of directors will in turn elect its own officers and will then administer Community Chest affairs for the 1929 chest until next year when a new board will again be elected.

At the same time revisions in the constitution will be presented for adoption. Various other matters will also be open for discussion at this meeting.

The present Community Chest board has operated successfully and conservatively. Budgets for the 1928 chest were reduced 20 per cent in order to meet the 1928 contributions.

The delinquent pledges of the 1928 chest have been reduced to a minimum and consist largely of those people who have left town or who have been unable to pay on the account of business conditions or illness.

The total contributions to the 1929 chest have reached $8,165.87. This is considerably more than the budget which was $7,500. However, $340 was definitely pledged to the Good Samaritan hospital and $150 was pledged to the Boy Scout organization. This leaves the Community chest proper with pledges and payments amounting to $7,675.87.

The insurance company bonded the contractors when a contract was made between the Clements Orr company and the State of Ohio and agreed to pay all lawful claims of the D. O. Bowers company a sub contractor, and all other sub-contractors.

Boughman states that he was hired by the D. O. Bowers company to do the work amounting to $796.75 and has received no money for his services. Ben Olds, of Mt. Gilead, and McDonald & Cope, of Columbus, are attorneys for the plaintiff.

BATTLE OF HOMERS CAPTURED BY CUBS

BY LES CONKLIN

NEW YORK, June 25—If the National league race resolves itself into a hand-to-hand fight between Chicago and Pittsburgh, there will be little to choose between the two contenders, for they have broken exactly even in 16 games this season. The Cubs squared the count yesterday when they downed the Pirates in a battle of home runs, 4 to 3, after the Bucs had administered three consecutive lickings to the McCarthy mauleurs.

Four-baggers accounted for six of the seven runs scored. Wilson, Hornsby and Cuyler did the Chicago cannonading, while Pitcher Bronte hit Pittsburgh's lone homer. By their victory the Cubs advanced to within a game and a half of the league leaders.

Won By Hornsby

Hornsby's round-tripper won the game and Wilson's was his eighteenth of the campaign.

The Brooklyn club, a nightmare to John McGraw all season, trimmed the Giants again, 5 to 2, and gained undisputed possession of fifth place.

A's Stretch Lead

In the American League the Athletics stretched their lead over the Yankees to nine games by nosing out the Red Sox, 5 to 4, while the Huggmen were idle. Ed Rommel, who boasts an unblemished record of seven straight wins, won his own game with a double in the eighth.

The St. Louis Browns passed up a chance to gain undisputed possession of second place when they lost to Cleveland, 10 to 4. Earl Averill, Cleveland's prize package from the Pacific coast, smacked two home runs.

Red Faber, Chicago veteran who held the Tigers to one hit in his last start against them, was knocked out as Detroit battered the White Sox to the tune of 13 to 1.

COOPER WON'T VISIT TRACK AT RAVENNA

"Ridiculous!" He Declares; Grand Jury Refuses To Indict Race Employe

COLUMBUS, June 25—"Ridiculous!"

That remark was made today by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper when asked if he would accept an invitation to visit the Ravenna race track and inspect the "contribution system" of barking race horses.

A special grand jury at Ravenna refused, yesterday, to indict a track employe, worker in one of the contribution booths, on a charge of gambling. Soon thereafterward, the annual racing meet was opened. County officials at Ravenna declared they could do nothing more to stop the "gambling." They indirectly invited Governor Cooper to visit the track that he might judge for himself whether the contribution system is illegal.

"It is obvious the contribution system is gambling," oCoper declared here today, adding he would "go nowhere near" the Ravenna track.

The race track situation in Ohio is "a problem," the governor asserted, saying he felt the solution of it rested in "local sentiment for law enforcement."

MAN OF 100 RACKETS IS "TAKEN FOR RIDE"

Frankie Marlow, Former Fighter Manager, Found Shot to Death

NEW YORK, June 25—They put the lights out of Frankie Marlow, one of a hundred rackets, as well known along Broadway as Forty-second st.

They took him for the well-known "ride" and left his bullet-gashed body in a clump of bushes in Flushing, a lonely spot where there are no white lights.

Maybe it was a woman—Marlow liked the skirts.

Maybe it was the liquor racket—Marlow was known to have been one of the pioneers in the rum-running syndicate business.

Maybe he pulled an Arnold Rothstein—Marlow is said to have owed $35,000 in gambling debts incidentally, the dead sporting man was a friend of the slain plunger.

The police were also guessing today although hopeful that a talk with the girl Marlow was seen walking with before his assassination will give them something to work on.

Marlow was former manager of Johnny Wilson, ex-middleweight boxing champ, and of Jack Delaney, heavyweight pride of Bridgeport, Conn.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

TODAY was hammier than any other day I have ever seen I couldn't wonder. It had rained some- time in the night or else the wet had condensed in the air and just kinda settled on the world so as to not make it up, so that when the sun came up the wet was sort of standing around on the flowers and everything and began to shine in the sun. It smelled so good than when I had got done let down and my britches on and went downstairs I got the bar and stood on the back step and practiced my voice in song. I held up my head and dropped my face open and let the music roll out, and my voice must of been just about shaking the dewdrops off the roses' when I felt someone tap me on the shoulder and I let my face open I was so surprised. It was my unkle and he put his hand under my chin and the other on the top of my head and closed my face and then he asked me what I was doing. I told him I was making some music. He said he hadn't heard the music, but what was the other thing I was making? I didn't say anything, and he said to run along and get the cows if their milk wasn't curdled.

I backed down the step, and was looking up at my unkle, and he said, some thing more—" and stuck his head out of the door a little ways and all at once something landed on his face and smashed all over his face and a little of it splashed on me. I never saw anyone so old so mad so quick as my unkle. He reached out and brushed me out of his way and it was so sudden I dropped the milk pail and he fell over it as he started for the barn and ripped his pants across one knee but he never stopped, and he got to the door and flang it open in about two jumps. But the barn was empty except for the Dummed brutes, and the manure hole was open into the alley. He asked me what was all over his face and I said it looked like someone had painted him with a rotten apple. He said it might have been worse. "Now listen," he said, "you find out who done that and I'll give you a half a dollar."

Red, whose father is a huckster said he brang a last year's apple with him this morning, and when they saw me standing on the step the Last Bag of Tripe horried the apple and cracked loose at me but missed me, and just then my unkle stuck his head out and kept the apple from being wasted. We played ball and swum all day and at supper my unkle asted me if I found out who done it, and I asted where the half was. He took it out and gave it to me and he said who was it. I told him he had only hired me to find out, not to tell him. I thought my father would make me give it back, but he only gave my unkle the laugh and seemed to think I was smart. I thought so myself. Nobody ever knows what a grown up will do.

So much of the earnest, even furious, discussion of matrimony passes right over the old bachelor's head.

The slim ankles which Rosalie is so fortunate to possess are well "set off" by the conventional zigzag symbols which represent lightning. Perhaps it is to indicate that the colors are fast. Instead of the speed of walking. Anyway, the black lightning clocks are applied to most of the popular shades of hosiery, while the red clocks are used on white, while jade, breezes and pearl blush only.
